

in this issue

no 15

june 2007

Editorial

004 BY PREDRAG MATVEJEVIC

politics

010 Viktor Yushchenko: "my Ukraine" EDITED BY MASSIMILIANO DI PASQUALE
The President of Ukraine explains the reasons for the country's latest and extremely serious crisis

fighting back

018 Being an oncologist in Baghdad today BY FARIAN SABAHI
Doctor and university professor Salma Hadad risks her life every day to heal children from different ethnic groups, cultures and religions

021 Bilquis, the new Queen of Sheba BY FARIAN SABAHI
A Pakistani lawyer, writer, feminist and pacifist tries to combine her country's economic development and the needs of women

025 Salima, an Algerian in the opposition BY ANNA VANZAN
Journalist and writer Salima Ghezali has described the civil war that bathed Algeria in blood in the 1990s

029 To be a feminist, not to be a feminist BY ANNA VANZAN
In post-Khomeini Iran, Noushin Armadi Khorassani combines a literary career with social action

rights

034 Islam and rights: co-habitation is possible BY ANTONIO BARBANGELO
There is a debate between the Western world and the Islamic world, as well as within the Muslim community, on to how to interpret the relationship between citizen, State and religion

the frontier of rights

040 EDITED BY ALESSANDRA CIPOLLA

environment

042 Water: so precious and so different from oil by Donato Speroni
In the 21st century water will be as precious as oil and political battles and perhaps international wars will be fought over it

society

050 Visokij Status: high class Russian-Style BY CRISTINA GIULIANO
Fashion fever runs high in Moscow in March and October. As purchasing power grows, so does the desire for the new collections

reportage

054 Vilna, here where Mitteleurope ends TEXT AND PHOTOS BY MONIKA BULAJ
The capital of Lithuania, barycentre of Jewish culture, was a bubbling melting pot of seven peoples, seven mythologies, seven literatures and seven nations energies

064 Rubbia: an alternative? I can see at least three EDITED BY VITTORIO BORELLI AND DONATO SPERONI
Nobel Prize winner Carlo Rubbia cites the new thermodynamic solar energy, third generation biomass technologies, and ocean currents as sources to focus on

071 A new governance for European gas BY ANTONIO VILLAFRANCA
Market rigidity makes changes in the short term unlikely but for greater stability we need to diversify the sources of supply

080 The latest test of strength between Russia and Europe BY PIERO SINATTI Collaboration in the energy sector has become essential for the European Union, but is proving hard to implement

that's incredible column

090 EDITED BY CARLOTTA MAGNANINI

the journey

092 Kosovo: the train of hope BY EMILIANO BOS, PHOTOS BY LIVIO SENIGALLIESI
A journey to the former Yugoslavia that obliges one to reckon with memory and the past. And a train that brings two ethnic groups together history

- 102 When history becomes a political weapon BY FERNANDO ORLANDI
There have been many occasions when historical reminders have been used for political purposes, as can be seen from the latest cases of the statue of the Russian soldier in Tallinn or the dispute between Tokyo and its neighbours

the book

- 108 My Istanbul was a fable BY MARIO LEVI
A journey among old photographs, the pretext for a number of stories. The Turkish capital narrated by a Turkish Jewish writer

glocalist leaders

- 114 The Italian who brings light to Mecca EDITED BY ANTONIO BARBANGELO
Piero Cecchini explains how a remote control system that is entirely Italian has been exported all over the world

banks

- 118 The “Petrified Forest” that moved on BY MARCELLO DE CECCO
A book by Francesco Giordano explains the steps that have led in a few short years to a modern, open and competitive banking system

migrations

- 122 Huelva’s strawberry fields EDITED BY SIMONE COFFERATI
So much production, so little manpower: in Spain, they have solved the problem by managing flows of seasonal migrant workers

election monitoring

- 126 EDITED BY MARCO MONTANARI

dossier

129 CHINA AND THE CEE COUNTRIES: AN OPEN CONTEST

130 China and CEE States in competition. Is there room for both?

BY MATTEO FERRAZZI AND DEBORA REVOLTELLA

The production-related specialization of the Central and Eastern European countries and China is complementary

136 From low wage to service-oriented economies BY FABRIZIO CORICELLI

The phenomenon of reallocation of resources from agriculture and manufacturing to services has gone hand-in-hand with growth in the new EU member States

138 The challenges of integration BY MICHAEL A. LANDESMANN

The emerging economies are gaining market share in international trade with manufactured goods

144 Central and Eastern European competitiveness from Italy’s point of view BY LUCIA TAJOLI

146 How Austria has benefited from European integration BY STEFAN BRUCKBAUER

Taking full advantage of the opening up of the former East bloc and EU enlargement, Austria is one of the countries that gained the most from the integration of CEE

free numbers

- 151 EDITED BY LARA COTT

the case

152 From Tallinn you can see Yugoslavia BY MARCO MONTANARI

The episode of the statue of the Russian soldier has brought to light the weaknesses of the young democracy of Estonia

cindia

159 The biggest human guinea pig laboratories in the world BY MARIA ELENA VIGGIANO

A journey to India and China where, according to international organisations, multi-national pharmaceutical companies use local populations for their experiments

new europe economic dossier

- 162 Focus on Romania

who’s who

- 166 Contributors to east n. 15